To Pigeon-Fill the Sky
Duncan Petrie

better a big empty sky than no sky at all.

I'm old enough to remember when pigeons filled the sky.

I've gone through all of the fish in the sea
I've walked through old footsteps and made them all muddy I wade in the river with holes in my the history books have all run out of pages
There are too many, too many sheets on my bed the potters are asleep at the wheel the forest is starting to run out of trees
I long for crustaceans to rule the earth again Eat! Or the feast will soon be dust the three little pigs have discovered titanium the stairway to heaven is much overgrown the grass springs up in the steps of the grave the jester is next in line for the throne
