Pictured: falafel.fyi's landing page.

Welcome to FALAFEL.FYI, a weird little microblog about my favorite kind of ball. Every time I order a falafel wrap from a new cart, cafe, or restaurant, I write a little review, and put it here.

There are currently 99 (!) of them.

For more information about my love of falafel wraps, why they're all rated five stars, and how I built this website, navigate your internet browser to https://falafel.fyi/about.

Submissions? Corrections? Email me at duncanpetrie1@gmail.com.

Enjoy your stay! ≈

★★★★★

99. Falafel Station

First eaten: Oct 13, 2026

→ I never understood trainspotting, but now that I've been

wrap/map about

These are all the places that I have EATEN FALAFEL

Welcome to FALAFEL.FYI, a weird little microblog about my favorite kind of ball. Every time I order a falafel wrap from a new cart, cafe, or restaurant, I write a little review, and put it here.

There are currently 99 (!) of them.

For more information about my love of falafel wraps, why they're all rated five stars, and how I built this website, navigate your internet browser to https://falafel.fyi/about.

Submissions? Corrections? Email me at duncanpetrie1@gmail.com.

Enjoy your stay! ≈

---- -- ---- -- ---- - ---- ---- -- ---- -- --

★★★★★

99. Falafel Station

First eaten: Oct 13, 2026

wrap/map about

★★★★★

45. Cosmic Kitchen

First eaten: Jun 15, 2025

→ Find far-out falafel, beyond the beetroot belt, where spears of pickled turnips pierce the kaleidoscopic night, auroras of aubergine purple and salad green, red-onion rings around celestial falafel, planetary falafel, gravitational falafel, falafel so big they don't fit in the terrestrial sky, falafel twisting, twirling, spinning through the black vast reaches of space. Five stars.

Palace St, Plymouth ↗

Pictured: screenshots of the wrap map on a mobile device.

wrap/map about

→ Peckham is pretty much on the other side of the planet, but now you find yourself here, far from all that you know, weary from days, weeks, months of travel, unsure if you'll ever see home again. You've crossed the mighty Thames, falafel.fyi/about/

https://falafel.🧆 / about

Egyptian ingredients and flavors, a missed Indian food, and recent tech vegetable oil significantly cheaper.

28 As I can tell, the writer Paul Balta first of "MediTERRA 2012: The Mediterranean Diet for Sustainable Regio Development".

Falafel first appeared in Alexandria, where the British invad quickly south, to Cairo and beyond. In most of Egypt 21 and made with fava beans. Outside of 22 a genetic intolerance to fava beans c an, and chickpeas became the primary ) (طعمية) is the diminutive of the Arabic word for food a bite or a small tasty thing. The word falafel (فلافل er), or ful (فول, fava bean).

ism by its other name, Glucose-6-phosphate dehydr

a bean's antagonists. For example, Pythagoras (of th m (artist's impression), and he regularly expounded to avoid them religiously, "either because they rese es of Hades".[24] According to legend, he once "persua
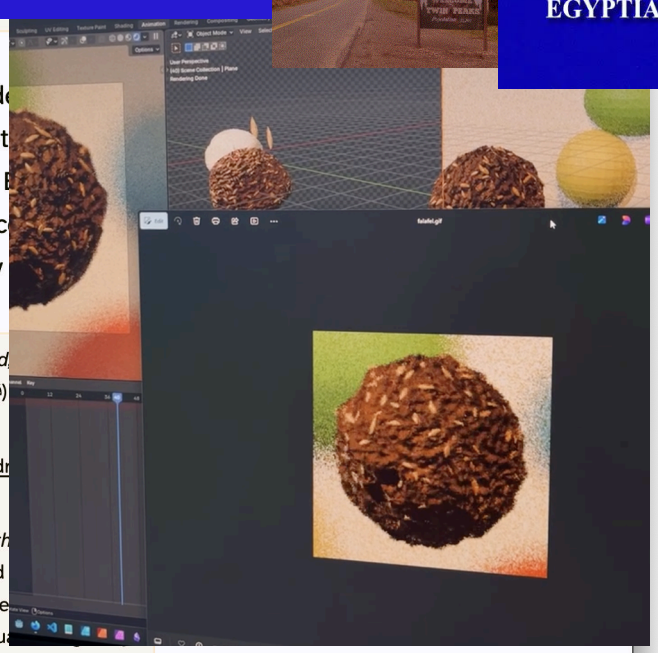
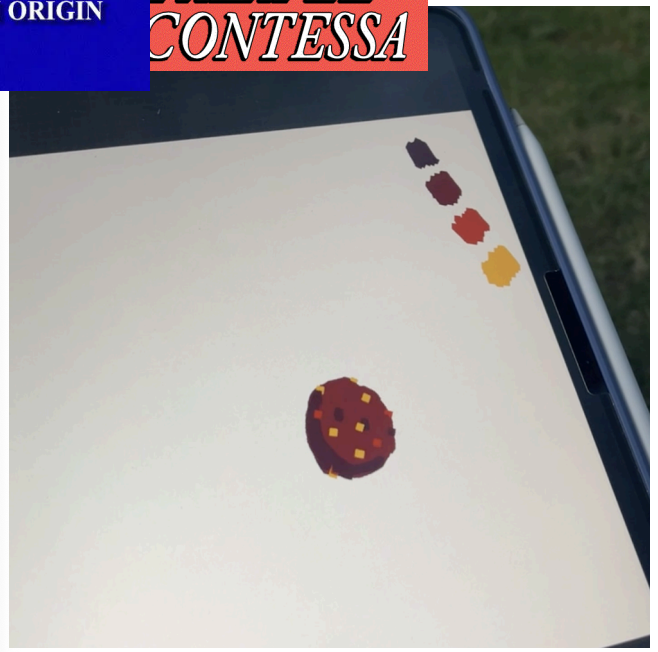
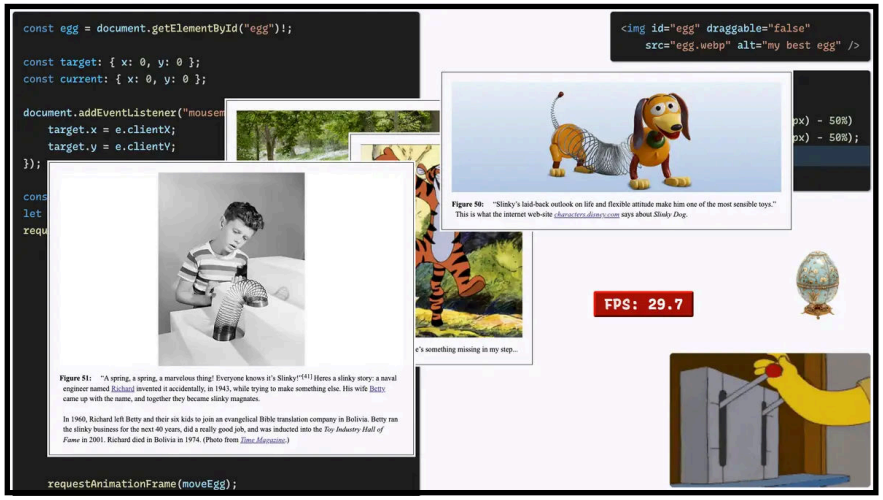
n eating beans."[25] Burying a fava bean flower in a jar is a bad idea,





In October, 2026, I gave a performance lecture at an indie tech conference in Bristol, UK.



Top right: screenshot of the spring animation section of performance lecture. For more information, see https://wdc.duncanpetrie.com.

Bottom right: performance lecture at Web Dev Conf in Bristol, October, 2026.

Below: https://spiders.duncanpetrie.com, with the info panel open and lots of visitors.

The browser extension lets you take your spider on the go, to any website you visit. It can also periodically spawn spiders to run across your screen. This is a fun addition to the web browsing experience, and does not activate your fight-or-flight instincts.

Download it here: https://chromewebstore.google.com/detail/a-spider-on-the-web/

- To Pigeon-Fill the Sky (2025) is a photographic storybook about the creative process, AI 'art', and pigeons. It exists as a photobook, a website, and a physical installation.

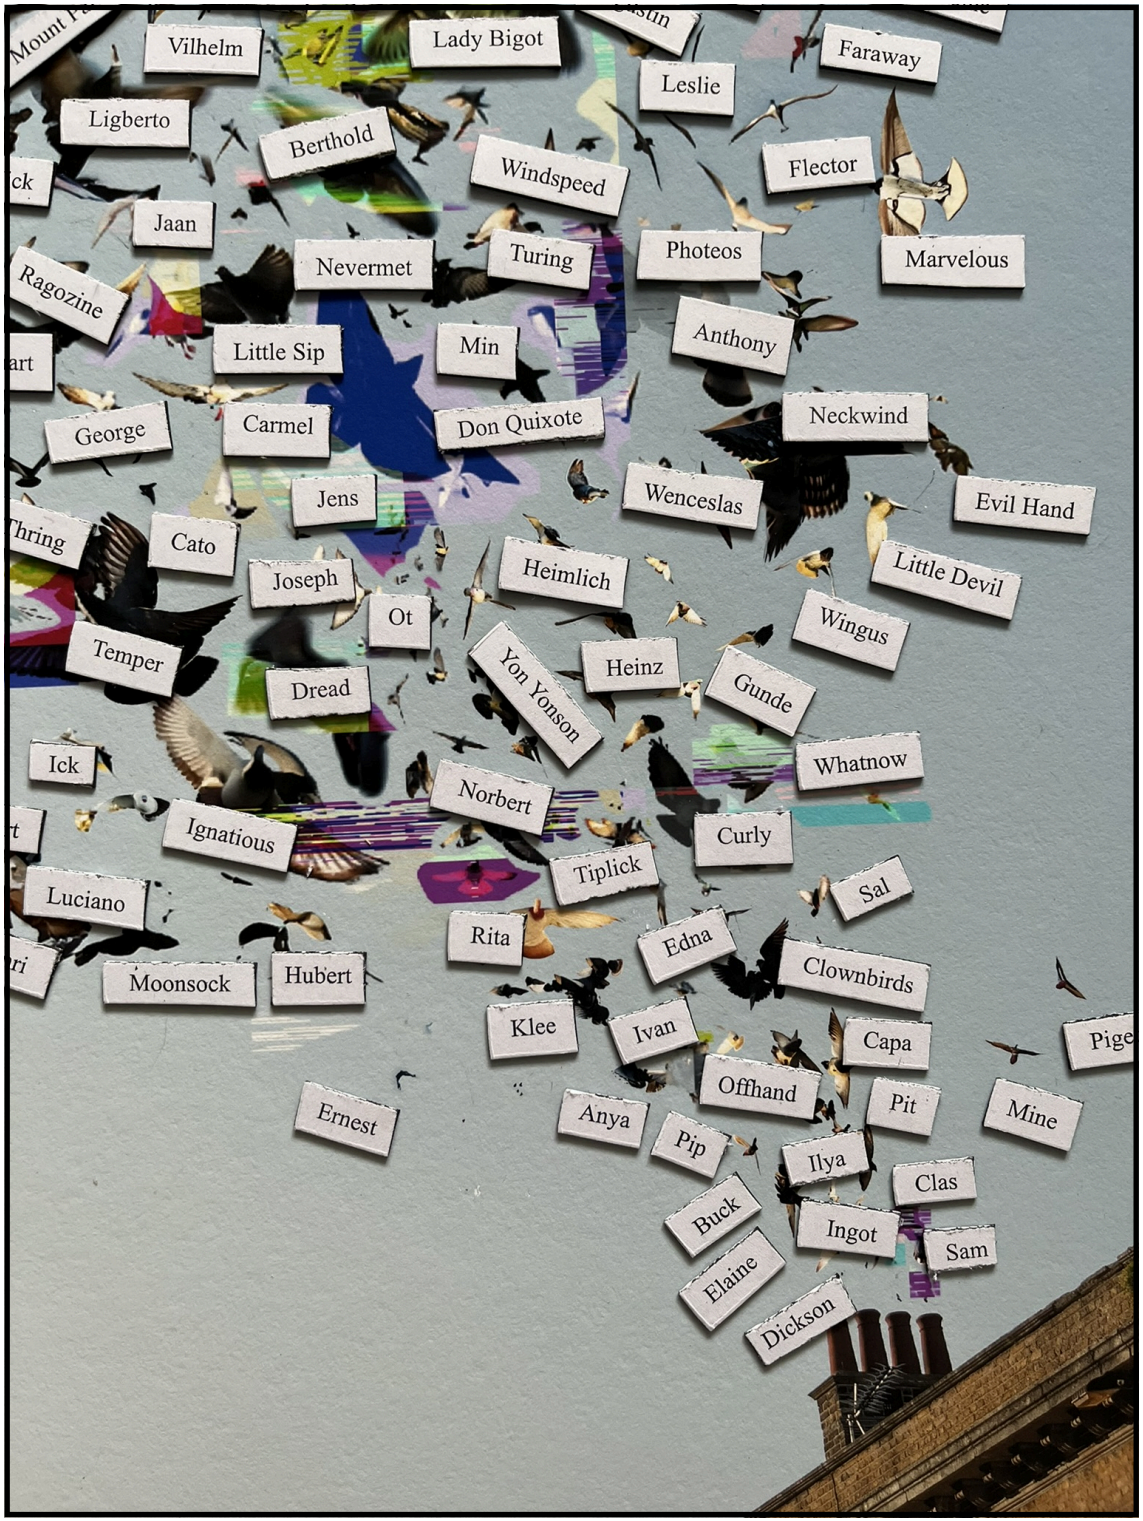
https://pigeons.duncanpetrie.com.

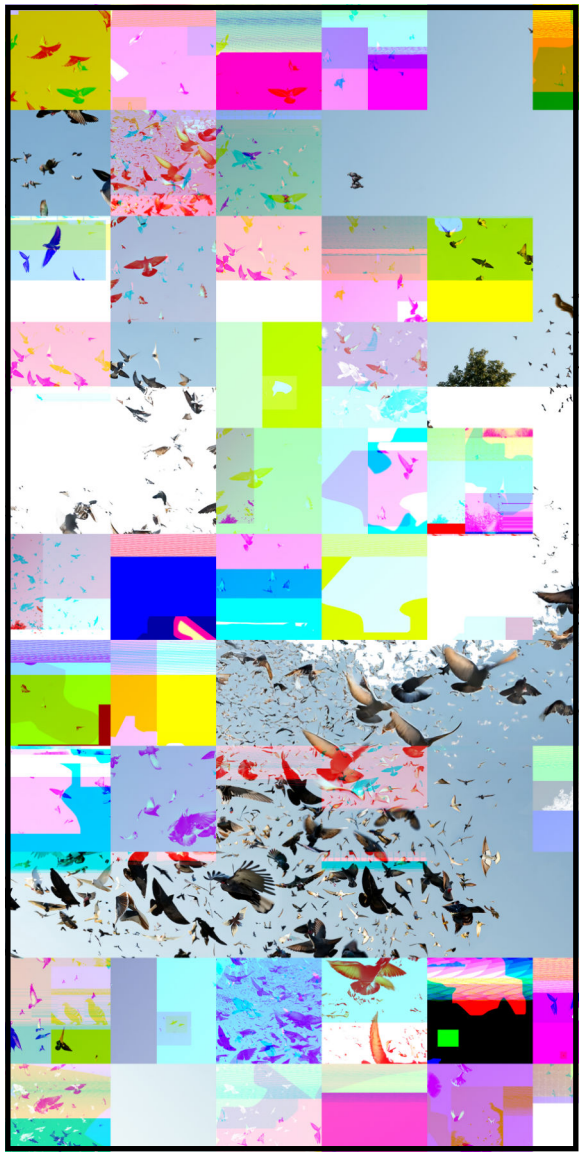
pigeons.duncanpetrie.com/website

to pigeon-fill the sky

made by duncan

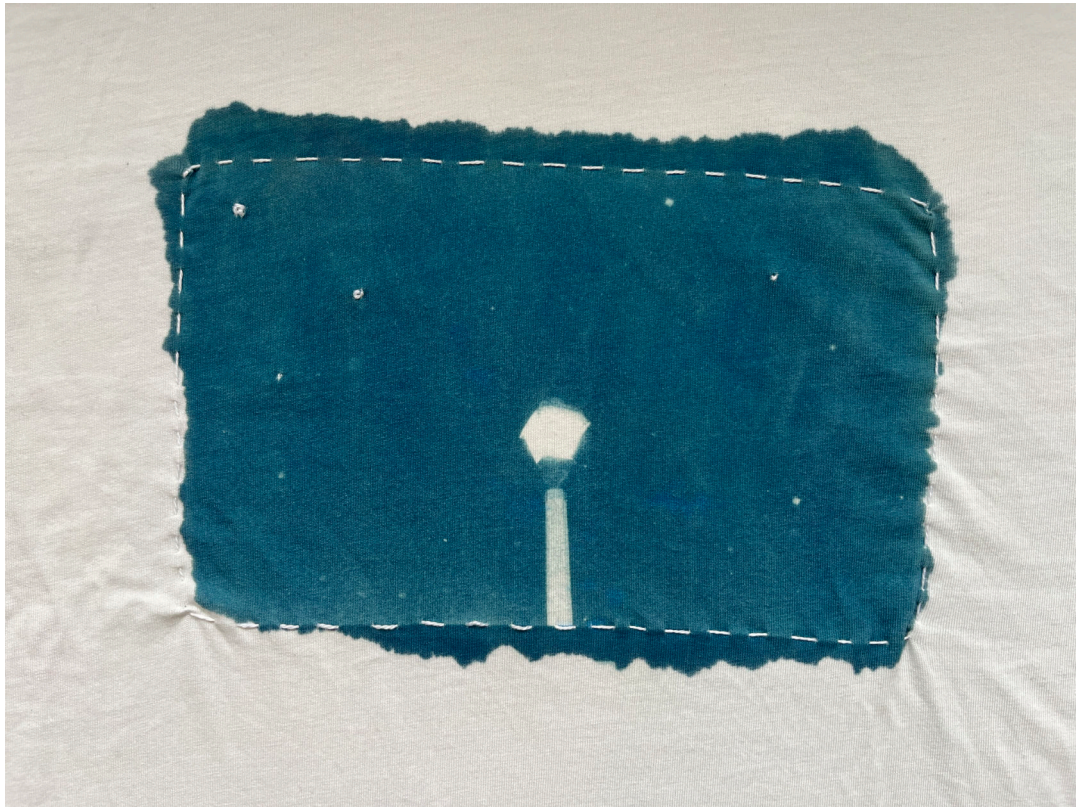
made by duncan





Left: screenshot of digital collage with visual artifacts. Pigeons added to digital photograph with Generative Fill tool.

Far left: hand-cut pigeon labels magnetically stuck to giclée print of digital collage. Image is a screenshot of Photoshop, showing accidental glitches, pigeons added with Generative Fill tool, and a digital photograph of chimneys and an empty blue sky.



Cyclist, Gudmundson

3/10

I've walked through old footsteps and made them all muddy

I've gone through all of the fish in the sea

I made in the river with holes in my

the history books have all run out of pages

There are too many, too many sheets on my bed

the potters are asleep at the wheel

I long for crustaceans to rule the earth again

the forest is starting to run out of trees

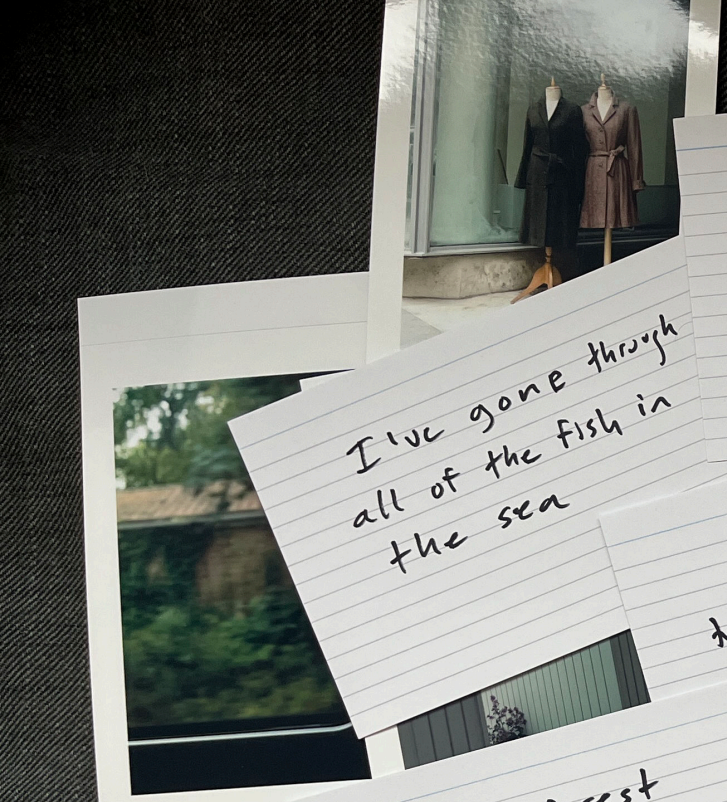
Eat! Or the feast will soon be dust

the three little pigs have discovered titanium

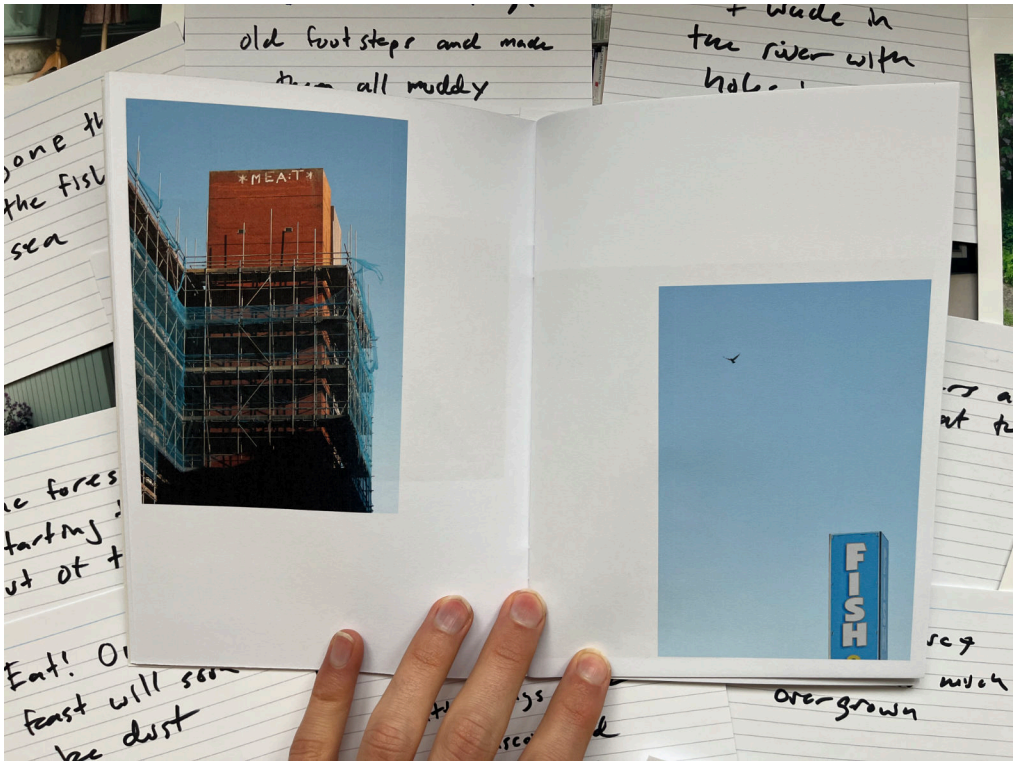
the stairway to heaven is much overgrown

the jester is next in line for the throne

the grass springing up in the steps of the grave



29



MEAT
FISH

Palimpsest
Duncan Petrie

Lingermyth
Duncan Petrie
duncanpetrie.com

imagination—and the glimpsed world outside his window are nested within the strip. More often, however, the uncrossable edge which sparks the Yearning is the edge between audience and art, the glimpsed world is the artwork itself.

This is possible because art, from science fiction to abstract painting, is fundamentally worldbuilding: the former creates, obviously, the speculative world depicted, while the latter, despite its lack of a clear narrative, creates a world informed by style and the feelings it conjures. Most mediums fall somewhere in between. Brian Eno, the musician who invented the concept of ambient music, sees worldbuilding as art's driving force. "I think that's kind of what artists do, they're always making worlds," he says in an interview with music producer Rick Rubin, "sometimes worlds they would just like to visit and look at, sometimes worlds they would like to spend time in" (Eno 2021: 16:05-16:05). An artist catches a glimpse of another world and implies its existence through art. And when the viewer of that artwork feels something, "what you feel is… Oh, that's a kind of world that could exist. Where those kinds of feelings happen, and are possible" (Eno 2021: 47:38-47:46). In this case, a world might be obvious, informed by the map behind the front cover of a fantasy novel, or more abstract, informed by the instruments used in an ambient track or the film grain in an old movie or the size of the brushstrokes of a painting. "It doesn't matter what it is that's being painted," says Eno. One clings to little stylistic details in artwork just like, when Yearning, one clings to little details in a landscape. "At that level, we start to get feelings for that work" (Eno 2021: 46:56-47-05). An artwork's aesthetics and style create a feeling, which cultivates an atmosphere, which builds, however abstractly, a world.

Fig. 3: Mondrian 1908-1910. Avond; De Rode Boom [painting].

As a child, Eno was fascinated by Piet Mondrian's post-impressionist landscapes. Incredibly evocative, they accomplished with primary colors and elegant form and bold style what detailed classical

THE DAILY DUNCAN

ON YEARNING

Lingermyth

Gradually, we grew out of our past, explained away halos and beasts and cities of clouds. History, after all, is written by those that live in the present.

But it's still there, that old world. Beneath our own, like a first coat of paint, glinting through chips and scratches.

GALLERY >

< 1/4 >

PROFILE

Hello! I'm Duncan Petrie

I'm a photographer, writer, and full stack web developer based in London.

In 2019, I needed an online portfolio. I took one look at the price of a website builder and decided to make my own from scratch.

Three years and four redesigns later, I'm proud of this messy work-in-progress.

ABOUT/CV >

FOR REEL

The Triumph of the Commons

THE CUTTING EDGE

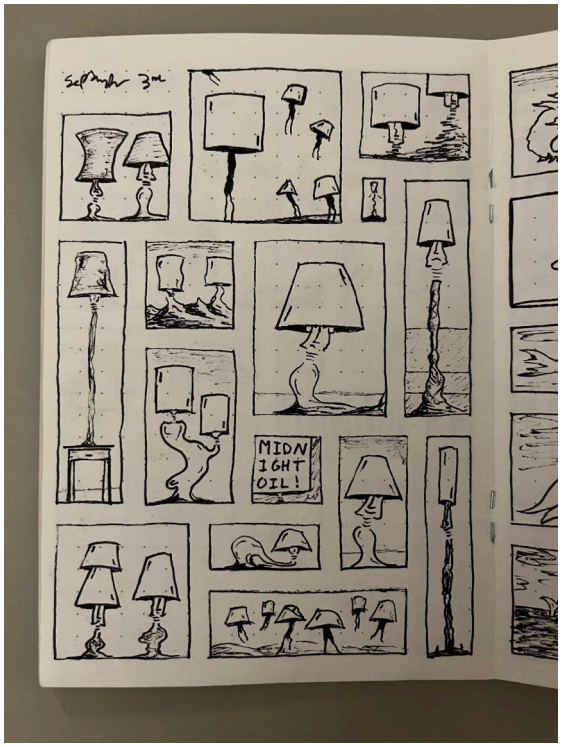
Cloud Discovered, Fluffiest

THE CUTTING BOARD

Man Makes Pizza, Fast

In tennis, a bagel is when the set ends with a score of 6–0. An extremely rare type of bagel, where no point is lost, is called a golden set. Most bagel sets occur in the early rounds of tennis tournaments where the favorites play lower-ranked players, such as lucky losers or wild cards.

https://wikipedia.org/wiki/Bagel_(tennis)



MIDN
IGHT
OIL!